

Two great ways to pump up the fun at your event with your own people's creativity!

The IMPROVprofessionals HOME VERSION!

#1: "Whose Show Is It Anyway?" Your group becomes the stars of the show!

We take a handful of your folks in advance and give them a crash course in simple improv games. We'll review some improv basics and cover ideas on making the most of the specific games we'll be using in the show together.

For the show itself, Milo emcees and even steps into the scene, if need be, to make sure they look good.

Sometimes, time permitting, we'll have the whole audience play a few games as pairs from their seats as well.

One option includes having Milo and another professional end the show with an extra game or two.

There's something really wonderful about seeing Sally from Accounting up there with Carlos from Payroll. We'll make heroes of your own folks. Unforgettably fun!

"You took five of my team members...and worked magic with them...normally shy and quiet became 'shining stars!'"

- Dr. Blake Synowski

"You created an amazing and unforgettable evening using my own people!"

- Techmer Plastics

#2: The Home Version Audience-fest! It's all on the fly as the audience comes up to play!

No time in your conference for the pre-training of the mini-troupe? If you've got a fairly outgoing group, there's a lot of fun we can have with a blend of audience involvement games and calls for volunteers to come up on stage and try things out.

Although it helps to have a few people pre-arranged to be our first few volunteers to break the ice, after that, the fun-loving in the group start jumping up to be in the next game with us.

Again, one variation could be to have an extra pro for a great mix of participation and entertainment.

And we also offer...

- Leading groups in games
- The Newlywed (or Co-Worker) Game
- Clowns
- Sci-Fi Improv
- Karaoke with thousands of songs
- Musical Acts (from gentle to Vegas)
- Face-painters
- And more!

Call your booking agent today to bring this kind of outrageous fun to your event!